

FATBOY SLIM IS BACK ON THE SNOWBOARD

Monday, 07 December 2009

Ladies and gentlemen, boys and girls. The Fatboy is back! Santa Claus has come early this December to cram none other than super star DJ Fatboy Slim down your chimney! After missing out on playing Snowbombing 2009 due to medical reasons, Fatboy Slim, aka Norman Cook is back on form and will honour his promise of returning to the mountains to headline the Forest Party at Snowbombing 2010.

The head honcho himself says "After a little false start, here I come!! I love a new experience and I'm eager for some high altitude raving! I only have one question " Is there such a thing as non-alcoholic gluwain? Can we get some in for the igloo especially?"

The original DJ par excellence, notorious for setting a party alight will be swapping the Beach at Brighton for a chillier setting this April as Snowbombing welcome him back to headline the greatest show on snow. Famed for mixing up meaty slabs of big beats and cut-up samples, Norman will treat the thousands of skiers, boarders and ravers to a unique high altitude performance 2000 metres above sea level. Bloomin' marvelous! With an Ivor Novello Award for his "outstanding contribution to British music" under his belt along with a fistful of top ten hits, Fatboy Slim has deservedly earned his place as the most in-demand DJ on the planet.

And as if that wasn't exciting enough, Snowbombing has pulled out the stops to tickle your festive fancy and are pleased as Christmas punch to announce some tasty new additions to their DJ line up.

Read the full story at ALTSOUNDS