No charge for skis and snowboards on bmibaby

Saturday, 05 September 2009

Low cost airline bmibaby has announced that passengers can take their skis and snowboards for free on flights to Geneva, Grenoble, Malaga and Toulouse.

The offer is only available for a limited period, so get in there quick to save a bundle on baggage charges.

Bmibaby usually charges Â£35.98 per pair of skies or snowboard per return booking, with rival budget carriers Easyjet and Ryanair charging Â£37 and Â£60 respectively.

The promotion celebrates the launch of the bmibabyâ€™s new low cost winter flights to Grenoble from Manchester, Cardiff, East Midlands and Birmingham International. Grenoble is within easy reach of top ski resorts such as Chamonix, Chamrousse, MÃ©ribel, Vaujany and Brides-les-Bains.
